

I will always miss Papa.

It would be difficult for words to describe the depth of love that grandpa had for my siblings and me. He was proud of each of us, and that pride was evident in the way he supported us—each of us felt his love.

He was truly an extraordinary man.

Grandpa had unending motivation - a quiet strength that carried him through life - and uplifted everyone fortunate enough to know him.

Whether it was graduating from Med school, completing a masters, starting a PhD, a new job, or just regular life's challenges, grandpa was always there encouraging us to be our best selves.

Papa's accomplishments were indeed remarkable, even more impressive, considering his humble beginnings. In spite of his achievements, Papa never lost sight of frugality. He taught us to live simply, well below your means - we are still striving to achieve this. To him, true wealth wasn't in any way material but was more about lives touched and relationships built. Papa was a true reflection of success beautifully interwoven with humility and simplicity.

Papa, your legacy of love, strength, and wisdom will always stay with us. We will keep your memory alive in our hearts, striving to live with the same kindness, generosity, and determination that you showed us throughout your life.

We love you, and we miss you. Rest in peace, Papa.
